To Measure or Not to Measure? Prophylactic Enoxaparin Management in Trauma Patients

Session Date: 11/22/2022

Session Time: 11:00 – 11:45 AM (CST)

Target Audience

This continuing education (CE) session was planned to meet the needs of professional staff who deal with the selection and monitoring of medication(s) as part of their patient care duties, including pharmacists, RNs, APRNs, PAs, MDs.

Activity Overview

Venous thromboembolism is a common, but often preventable, cause of morbidity and mortality in trauma patients. Recent studies have demonstrated that recommended dosing strategies may provide inadequate prophylaxis in the trauma population. Currently, there is a distinct lack of consensus and recommendations addressing the persistent rates of thrombus formation or optimal dosing of enoxaparin. This presentation will review literature comparing enoxaparin regimens and the potential role of anti-xa level monitoring to guide appropriate prophylactic dosing to decrease the incidence of thromboembolism.

Learning Objectives

At the conclusion of this knowledge-based CE session, participants should be able to:

1. Identify the physiologic factors that increase venous thromboembolism risk in trauma patients
2. Outline current recommendations and their pitfalls for venous thromboembolism prophylaxis in trauma patients
3. Discuss evidence for anti-Xa monitoring for venous thromboembolism prophylaxis with enoxaparin
