Breathing New Life into COPD Exacerbation Management

Session Date: 11/21/2023

Session Time: 11:00 – 11:45 AM (CST)

Target Audience

This continuing education (CE) session was planned to meet the needs of professional staff who deal with the selection and monitoring of medication(s) as part of their patient care duties, including pharmacists, RNs, APRNs, PAs, MDs.

Activity Overview

In the 2023 COPD Gold Guidelines, there is a notable shift towards a stronger recommendation for the utilization of blood eosinophil counts in guiding the use of inhaled corticosteroids for the pharmacological management of COPD patients, as compared to previous guideline iterations. Historically, the consideration of blood eosinophils has been less clearly defined. This presentation will delve into the literature shedding light on the predictive value of blood eosinophils and the evidence surrounding the application of inhaled corticosteroids in the treatment of COPD patients. Furthermore, it will explore alternative anti-inflammatory agents, while emphasizing the importance of tailoring a pharmacotherapy regimen to suit the unique characteristics of each patient.

Learning Objectives

At the conclusion of this knowledge-based CE session, participants should be able to:

1. Describe the pathophysiology and risk factors associated with COPD exacerbations.
2. Summarize the strengths and limitations of eosinophilic biomarkers as predictive and monitoring tools for COPD exacerbations.
3. Discuss anti-inflammatory agent choices in COPD exacerbations based upon patient-specific factors.
